the Defender
CHILDREN'S HEALTH DEFENSE NEWS & VIEWS

Order Now! "The Wuhan Cover-Up" by RFK Jr.!

12/04/23 • BIG TECH • BIG PHARMA • VIEWS

Exclusive: Author of 'Controligarchs' Exposes 'Billionaire Class, their Secret Deals, and the Globalist Plot to Dominate Your Life'

In his new book, "Controligarchs: Exposing the Billionaire Class, their Secret Deals, and the Globalist Plot to Dominate Your Life," author Seamus Bruner reveals the long history of eugenicists, technocrats and social engineers who use their fortunes to enrich themselves while promoting an undemocratic and dystopian future for the rest of us.

By John-Michael Dumais

34

Miss a day, miss a lot. Subscribe to The Defender's Top News of the Day. It's free.

In his new book, "Controligarchs: Exposing the Billionaire Class, their Secret Deals, and the Globalist Plot to Dominate Your Life," author Seamus Bruner explores the long history of eugenicists, technocrats and social engineers — from the Rockefellers and the Club of Rome to Bill Gates, Jeffrey Epstein, Mark Zuckerberg, Klaus Schwab and World Economic Forum (WEF) members — who use their fortunes, often under the guise of philanthropy, to enrich themselves while promoting an undemocratic and dystopian future for the rest of us.

"Imagine a world in which you own nothing and rent everything," Bruner warns in the book notes. "Most of the protein in your diet comes from bugs. You are not allowed to have more than one child, and your financial and medical data are instantly transferred to a centralized government database via a subdermal microchip."

Bruner sat down with The Defender to discuss his book, the state of the world and his outlook for humanity.

Bruner, director of research at the Government Accountability Institute (GAI), said he honed his craft in investigative journalism by assisting GAI's founder Peter Schweizer with his 2011 book, "Throw Them All Out: How Politicians and Their Friends Get Rich Off Insider Stock Tips, Land Deals, and Cronyism That Would Send the Rest of Us to Prison."

That project led to a couple of "60 Minutes" exposés and ultimately to the passage of the Stop Trading on Congressional Knowledge Act — or STOCK Act — passed in 2012, according to Bruner. "That experience also disabused me of any notion of going into politics," he said.

"'Follow the money' is our motto here [at GAI]," said Bruner, whose subsequent investigations are documented in his books, "Compromised: How Money and Politics Drive FBI Corruption" (2018) and "Fallout: Nuclear Bribes, Russian Spies, and the Washington Lies That Enriched the Clinton and Biden Dynasties" (2020, with John Solomon).

Bruner, who is studying to become a certified anti-money laundering specialist, said, "We're not against billionaires conceptually, just against ones who want to use their money and power and influence to exert control over your life."

"The ten wealthiest men on the planet — including Gates, [Jeff] Bezos, Zuckerberg, and [Elon] Musk — doubled their combined personal net worth over the course of the COVID-19 pandemic," Bruner wrote in "Controligarchs," "while the dwindling middle class suffered, and more than 160 million people [worldwide] were pushed into poverty."

"Controligarchs" documents the histories of some of the richest families on the planet, and how they have used their wealth and influence to establish plans like Agenda 2030, the Open Society, The Great Reset and the transhumanist movement — and organizations like the Coalition for Epidemic Preparedness Innovations and the Wellcome Trust — which are resulting in a virtual war on farmers and food, on informed consent and natural healing options, on energy and jobs, and on freedom of speech and other unalienable rights.

"The Wuhan Cover-Up" by Robert F. Kennedy Jr.
ORDER NOW

Rockefellers and the takeover of public health

"Controligarchs" begins with the recounting of a 2009 "secret meeting" at Rockefeller University in Manhattan, convened by Gates, with a dozen other billionaire philanthropists in attendance, including David Rockefeller, George Soros, Ted Turner, Michael Bloomberg, Warren Buffett and Oprah Winfrey, and the heads of financial titans Blackstone Group and Tiger Management, tech giant Cisco and other multinational companies.

Calling themselves the "Good Club," their aim was to "set the agenda for the future of global health," Bruner wrote.

Building on the Club of Rome think tank founded in 1968 by Rockefeller-linked scientists and intellectuals, the Good Club members devised the "Giving Pledge," an initiative designed to steer billions toward their priority of slowing population growth.

The Club of Rome had earlier published several reports framing "The Predicament of Mankind" — overpopulation and pollution — as existential threats requiring global governance solutions — a "one world order" — according to Bruner.

"The Limits to Growth" was another work supported by the Club of Rome. Published in 1972, the authors used computer modeling to predict that overpopulation and resource depletion would soon destroy the world.

"This 'predicament of mankind' said we need a common enemy for mankind to unite against," Bruner told The Defender, "and they settled on overpopulation — and that meant the problem of mankind is mankind itself."

According to Bruner, this is the source of the anti-human ideology that runs through narratives like climate change, "where you are the problem."

"You need fixing and they've got just the solutions for you," he added. "Now, it just so happens that those solutions enrich these guys, so it seems a little too convenient."

In his latest book, Bruner traces the Good Club's meeting location to the Rockefeller family and its projects starting in the early 1900s, such as the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research.

The Rockefellers, through their charitable foundations, pioneered a model of maintaining power and influence across generations by meeting consumer needs while also shaping societal beliefs and behaviors.

The Rockefellers built a monopoly in the oil industry and later expanded their reach by tackling public health issues and funding medical research. The Rockefeller Institute — later Rockefeller University — made key discoveries about diseases like meningitis, polio and yellow fever in the early 1900s, Bruner wrote.

In 1914, the Rockefellers established the Yellow Fever Commission to try to eradicate yellow fever by eliminating the aedes aegypti mosquito.

Fast-forward a century, and you have the Rockefellers' protégé, Gates, involved in another mosquito-eradication project, funneling "at least $93 million into controversial efforts to engineer and release roughly two billion genetically modified mosquitoes — first in Florida and California — and then, he hopes, everywhere," Bruner wrote.

In 1941, the Rockefeller Foundation was approached by the U.S. government to vaccinate "virtually all" Army recruits against yellow fever, but the vaccines, which were tainted with hepatitis B, caused widespread illness among the troops.

"The Rockefellers' international yellow fever efforts gave them authority. And more importantly, the more diseases the Rockefellers tried to control, the more power and influence they gained in the international health community," Bruner wrote.

They funded the development of contraceptives and backed population control advocates like eugenicist Margaret Sanger — founder of Planned Parenthood — to drive down global birth rates, especially among populations they considered less desirable.

The foundation also pioneered fields like psychology and sex research that helped destigmatize topics like abortion and promiscuity.

By the time the COVID-19 pandemic hit, the Good Club and its associates had already been working for decades on medical and technological innovations "they hoped would cure every human ill, from poverty to infectious diseases," Bruner wrote. "COVID-19 presented an 'opportunity' to introduce these technocratic panaceas."

RFK Jr. and Brian Hooker's New Book: "Vax-Unvax"
ORDER NOW

The 'Embrace-Extend-Extinguish' strategy

In "Controligarchs," Bruner extensively covers Gates, from his father's (Bill Sr.'s) involvement in Planned Parenthood to Bill's troubles with Clinton's U.S. Department of Justice over Microsoft's anticompetitive practices to his relationship with Epstein and his later pandemic-related nongovernmental organization (NGOs), initiatives and Big Pharma companies.

"Microsoft had a strategy for monopolizing the software industry called Embrace-Extend-Extinguish (or Exterminate)," Bruner wrote.

Bruner shared how Microsoft made enhancements to the Netscape browser to turn it into its own "Internet Explorer" browser, and placed it on every PC, then pushed "for standards and regulations that would make it impossible for their competitors."

"We saw that same strategy during the pandemic with the generic medications like ivermectin they wanted to bury," Bruner said, referring to the warp-speed vaccine development — funded by Gates.

"They even want mRNA products to replace existing vaccines and other drugs," he said.

"You see the same thing happening now with food," Bruner said, pointing to the efforts of Gates, Schwab and others to curtail the use of meat, sanction the use of certain fertilizers and shut down farms, all while pushing for the development of fake meat and insect diets promoted by companies in which they are heavily invested.

Bruner wrote that Dutch multinational chemical giant Royal DSM — a partner of the Gates Foundation and the WEF — was just one example of a company that "seemed well positioned to profit from the [United Nations' Agenda] 2030 goals."

Royal DSM "had prepared for nitrogen reductions with new synthetic fertilizers, developed alternative proteins from canola, and even patented a solution to cow flatulence."

The German company Bayer AG, another WEF partner, bought Monsanto in the hopes of harnessing its CRISPR gene editing crop technology, Bruner wrote. "Next, Bayer teamed up with a Gates-funded biotech company to genetically modify plants and turn them into self-fertilizing crops."

"This was the kind of patented breakthrough that could disrupt the livelihood of independent farmers everywhere," he wrote, pointing out how Good Club members like Turner, Bezos and Gates were "quietly and systematically amassing millions of acres of prime ranchland and farmland" in the U.S. that could "rapidly integrate the new fertilizers and so-called sustainable agricultural technologies."

It was "a bitter irony," Bruner wrote, that many of the same companies that profited from "Agenda 2030-compliant farming techniques" had previously made their money from the "dirty" agricultural technologies they now denounce.

"For decades, Rockefeller interests had secured dozens of patents relating to nitrogen fertilizer production. But those patents had expired," he wrote.

"That's the throughline for all of these guys: They don't want competitors," Bruner told The Defender. "And that's why patents play into all of this stuff. Bill Gates only invests in the fake meat companies after they've received patents for their protein chains."

Gates invested $23 million in Monsanto, which pioneered the patenting of seeds, according to Bruner. "So they want patented foods and then they want to ban the competition, extinguish the cows," he said.

To underscore his point, Bruner said Ireland was ready to slaughter anywhere from 40,000 to 200,000 cattle "all on the altar of climate change."

Agenda 2030 is heavily focused on a "net zero" future, Bruner said, meaning the balancing or elimination of carbon emissions. "This is about taking control of both the energy sector and the food sector, and they're using the same threat of climate change to do it."

"Having the fertilizers to the seeds to the protein chains all patented leads to a massive consolidation for just a very few players who … are already in bed with the governments that are pushing these policies," he said.

Your support helps fund this work, and CHD's related advocacy, education and scientific research.
DONATE NOW

'Up to the opposite of what they're claiming to be about'

Bruner discussed the broad array of efforts unfolding under the guise of Agenda 2030 and "build back better" slogans, and how they are the total opposite of what they seem.

"Who would be against 'build back better'? 'Green' — who's against green? I mean, nobody wants to live on a dirty planet, nobody wants pollution," he said.

Bruner believes that the problem with the climate change narrative is that it is an unfalsifiable hypothesis. "You can't even question it," he said.

He pointed to Greta Thunberg who "get their talking points from a World Economic Forum white paper" and who are "always saying the Earth is going to end in 10 years," he said, "but you reach the 10-year waypoint and New York City isn't underwater. So they constantly keep shifting the goalposts."

People in the WEF concluded that climate change wasn't sufficiently scary, Bruner said, but that the pandemic fright provided "a great opportunity to mobilize resources."

Bruner gave the example of the Inflation Reduction Act — a name no one could argue with — with $450 billion earmarked for various climate change programs. "It's really just corporate welfare, welfare for oligarchs," he said. "Why the heck do these guys need our money?"

As for Gates' investments in meat alternatives like Beyond Meat and TerraPower, which their promoters claim will save us from climate change, Bruner said taxpayers helped fund these but "We won't ever see a return on that investment."

These are examples of "stakeholder capitalism," one of the "pillars of the Great Reset," Bruner said, along with "going green," ESG (environmental-social-governance investment measures) and the "fourth industrial revolution" — including artificial intelligence (AI) and the "Internet of Things."

"Stakeholder capitalism is absolutely an inverted term," he said. "It's not capitalism at all, but state-run capitalism, with the business leaders and the NGOs, the academic institutions and the government — and we don't get a seat at the table. The profits are privatized and the losses are socialized," he said.

"Stakeholder capitalism looks strikingly like China's tyrannical 'state capitalism' model (which was actually developed with the help of Kissinger, Rockefeller, and the WEF) and is enjoying popularity among governments," he wrote.

"Birth control" is another inverted term," Bruner said. "It doesn't sound like population control but then they persuade people they shouldn't even want to have kids."

"The Rockefeller Foundation focus-tested terms like 'family planning' and 'funding maternal health' — not 'population reduction' obviously, right?" he said.

Bruner said years of propaganda have convinced people that they don't want to have children.

Soros is another example of people who are "up to the opposite of what they're claiming to be about," Bruner said. "No one could be against names like 'The Democracy Initiative.'"

Bruner wrote that Soros, was "conspicuously quiet on the issue of climate change" because he was heavily invested in fossil fuels. But after investing in green energy, Soros helped the Obama administration "crush the coal industry … then grabbed the stocks for pennies on the dollar."

Onrushing dangers of AI, transhumanism

Bruner shared his concerns about AI and transhumanism, promoted by Big Tech and specifically led by Meta's Zuckerberg and his vision of the metaverse, and by WEF agenda contributor Yuval Noah Harari.

Harari celebrated the pandemic because it convinced people "to accept [and] to legitimize total biometric surveillance," wrote Bruner, quoting Harari from an October 2020 video. "If you want to stop this epidemic, we need not just to monitor people, we need to monitor what's happening under their skin," Harari said.

In a "60 Minutes" interview from 2021, wrote Bruner, Harari said in the future, people "may be able to purchase immortality through biotech and biotechnological upgrades." In just a few generations humanity may see a new class structure where poor people still die, but the rich, "in addition to all the other things they get, also get an exemption from death," Harari said.

As far-off as some of these concerns may seem, Bruner pointed to the rapid development of generative AI as a more imminent danger, a topic he covers in detail in "The Dystopian Present" chapter of "Controligarchs."

Quoting OpenAI's Sam Altman from a July article in The Atlantic, Bruner said: "A lot of people working on AI pretend that it's only going to be good; it's only going to be a supplement; no one is ever going to be replaced … Jobs are definitely going to go away, full stop."

"It's pretty dark because as you use AI in your job, you're training your replacement," he added.

"AI is now passing the bar exam. It'll come for the lawyers, it'll come for every sector," he said.

Estimates range from 40% to as high as 80% of jobs being lost to AI, Bruner said. "So what happens when everybody loses their job?"

"You are already starting to see videos percolating up on social media of mostly young people sobbing in their cars because they're being evicted and can't afford rent," he said, adding that in some areas rents have doubled or tripled, and many can't afford health or car insurance — if they can afford a car at all.

"Now imagine that on a much grander scale as more people lose their jobs. Now you've got a million squabbling for 1,000 jobs," which will increase calls for a "universal or unconditional basic income [UBI], according to Sam Altman," Bruner said.

While a lot of people are celebrating that idea as a positive development, he said, some in the tech industry are talking about a UBI payment in the range of $13,500 a year.

"You're not going to be getting the same salary once a robot can do 1,000 people's jobs," he said.

'I've got a lot of hope for the future'

Despite the harrowing narratives Bruner explored in his book, he said he is bullish on the future of humanity.

"I've got a lot of hope for the future. I don't think we're going to put up with it," he said, referring to the agenda on offer by the "controligarchs."

Bruner emphasized the importance of being an "evangelist" for the truth.

"Everybody needs to get the word out about what these guys are up to," he said. "But you've got to be armed with the facts and figures to back it all up, otherwise you're going to sound like a conspiracy nut."

Bruner said he hopes his deeply referenced book, where he also shares ideas for taking back our institutions and control over our lives, will be a useful resource for helping more people wake up.

Bruner sees the emergence of a "thirst for authenticity, a thirst for realness among people" — a wave that is pushing back against the rollout of fake AI bot posts on social media, against fake meat, fake food and fake science, he said.

"We've got a big uphill battle ahead of us, but the number of people who are aware of the subjects I talk about in the book — like those who rejected the vaccines and boosters — it's very encouraging," he said, adding, "Once someone is awake to the truth about what's going on, they can't really be put back to sleep."

"Controligarchs" is available from the publisher, Penguin Random House, and from Amazon, Barnes and Noble, and many other booksellers.

Subscribe to The Defender – It's Free!
First Name.. Last Name.. Email.. SIGN UP

SUGGEST A CORRECTION

John-Michael Dumais
John-Michael Dumais is a news editor for The Defender. He has been a writer and community organizer on a variety of issues, including the death penalty, war, health freedom and all things related to the COVID-19 pandemic.

Sign up for free news and updates from Children's Health Defense. CHD focuses on legal strategies to defend the health of our children and obtain justice for those injured. We can't do it without your support

Republishing Guidelines

Children's Health Defense Comment Policy
We welcome relevant and respectful comments. Off-topic comments may be removed.
Please read our Comment Policy before commenting.
Got it

34 Comments
1 Login ▾

Join the discussion…
LOG IN WITH
OR SIGN UP WITH DISQUS ?
Name

♡ 1 • Share
Best Newest Oldest

Jiva Das
13 days ago
"We're not against billionaires conceptually" That is a problem for me. Poverty exists and is increasing in the world because of these billionaire wealth hoarders. They're all sociopaths, you need to lack empathy to feel ok with that kind of wealth. Sick people who use their wealth to accumulate more wealth with no concern for the masses of humanity they drive into poverty. There's no such thing as overpopulation or dwindling resources. Because people are forced to leave rural areas and move to cities to earn a meager wage over 70 percent of the world's population lives in urban areas with vast swaths of land unused or occupied. As for resources if the parasite class wasn't hoarding there would be enough for everyone to be well cared for.
7 0 Reply • Share ›

W. Poe White → Jiva Das
12 days ago
"There's no such thing as overpopulation or dwindling resources."

Unfortunately, this is not true. Overpopulation is a real problem. Resources are finite and there are limits to how far technological advances can expand the carrying capacity of our finite resource base.

At about 8 billion people, the world is within one more population doubling of absolute Malthusian scarcity. Technocratic methods of artificial food production and eating lower on the food chain (i.e. insects, algae, etc.) would enable a larger population, but at a terrible price in terms of health and freedom. Technocracy would be a totalitarian dystopia. So we must reckon carrying capacity on the assumption of organic agriculture and animal husbandry producing natural, healthful, whole foods for everyone.

This means that the carrying capacity we face, with respect to food alone, is somewhat less than 16 billion (one more doubling). If we are to provide prosperous modern lifestyles for all people in the world, there are other resource limits which will lower carrying capacity still further.

see more
1 0 Reply • Share ›

Stephen Simac → W. Poe White
11 days ago
My 2007 book, Lose Weight, Feel Better, Save Money and Really Reduce Greenhouse Gases, identified many low tech solutions to do this. One of the first chapters was It's the Military, Stupid!, while others examined and proposed available and possible alternatives for housing, foods, fibers, fuel, transportation, health. Can't even remember them all. Not a big seller, but I'm giving it away free, along with my other e-books to subscribers to my substack newsletter.
0 0 Reply • Share ›

W. Poe White → Jiva Das
12 days ago
The real problem with having billionaires is the monopolization of the economy that is necessary so that billionaires might exist. This concentrates control over production when production should be decentralized into large numbers of small and medium-sized local businesses thoroughly distributed throughout the nation.

Small and medium-sized businesses hire far more people than large businesses and provide job opportunities for far more people. Not only this, they distribute these opportunities throughout the land rather than concentrating them in a small number of large cities.

The key to making this happen is a deep reform of the monetary and banking system. Banks create the majority (about 97%) of all money out of thin air when they issue loans. Currently, large banks like JP Morgan Chase, Goldman Sachs and Wells Fargo dominate the banking sector. Such elite banks also control the US Federal Reserve, Bank of England and European Central Bank.

These large banks should be totally eliminated and replaced by a banking ecosystem consisting of small, local, non-profit credit union banks such as Germany's Raiffeisen volksbanken, as suggested by economist Richard Werner.

see more
1 0 Reply • Share ›

Voyt Regnal
13 days ago
Mehh...Bruner is writing about those he can, or is allowed to write. There are numerous books of this type, without naming who hides behind 'puppets for clubbing' presented at the cover of the book.
6 0 Reply • Share ›

W. Poe White → Voyt Regnal
13 days ago
Indeed, Bruner sounds like another limited hangout. He makes some good points, but stops far short of saying all that needs saying.

The drive by elites toward centralization of capitalist ownership in tandem with totalitarian social control initiatives which we are witnessing now is obviously not merely the product of a handful of oligarchs like Gates, Bezos and Schwab. These public faces of the wannabe-Technocrat plutocracy are playing important roles, but there are many more people quietly doing their part who are not in the media limelight.

There is one unique ethnic group, in particular, whose broad-based support is essential for the Agenda 21 Technocratic Great Consolidation of power through monopolization of all means of production to proceed. We're not allowed to name them here.
1 0 Reply • Share ›

correspondence committee → W. Poe White
12 days ago
Is it a limited hangout (or controlled opposition) when any focus upon a subject by definition is limited?
0 0 Reply • Share ›

W. Poe White → correspondence committee
12 days ago
The impression I get from reading Dumais' description of Bruner's Controligarchs is that Bruner is focusing too much on a handful of publicly visible oligarchs like Bill Gates and paying insufficient attention to various organizations, individuals and groups who aren't themselves billionaires but which are essential for the Technocratic Globalist agenda to proceed.

The billionaires are not masterminding all of this all on their own. There are non-billionaire academics and researchers, deep state personnel, lawyers, doctors, journalists, public school educators, NGO personnel, bureaucrats, investors, fund managers, real estate developers and so forth all working for this agenda. Organizations like the ADL and agencies of the

Donate Now
You make the difference.

Latest News

Dying to Lose Weight? U.S. Poison Control Centers Report 1,500% Spike in Calls About Popular Weight-Loss Drug

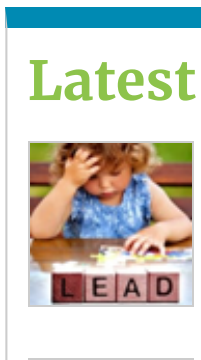
Schools, Hospitals Should Avoid Serving GMO Foods to Kids, AAP Says

Fluoride Linked to Diabetes in Kids + FDA Approves Sickle Cell Gene Therapies + More

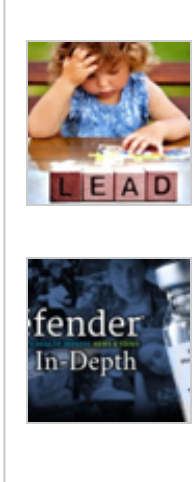
MORE NEWS

Latest Views

Low Levels of Lead Linked to 765 Million Lost IQ Points in Kids 5 and Under



Watch: Gardasil's HPV Vaccine: Experts Weigh in on Risks, Deceptive Ad Campaigns and Lawsuits



EPA 'Safe' Limits for Pesticides on Food Geared Toward Adults, Not Kids

MORE VIEWS

Get FREE News & Updates!
First Name..
Last Name..
Email..
SIGN UP

Get Text Alerts
Sign up for breaking news from The Defender.
Currently only eligible for numbers in the U.S. and Canada.
1234567890
Phone
REQUIRED. Phone number must be in a standard 10-digit format: 1234567890 or 123-456-7890
CONTINUE

Israeli state, for example, are playing major roles. The AMA is on board with Big Pharma.

I haven't read Bruner's book, maybe he does delve into the non-billionaire agents working for Globalist Technocracy and the role of organizations, but I do not see sign of this from Dumais' review.

I don't mean to be overly harsh toward Bruner. It's better that books like his exist than nothing. But there is more that needs saying as well on the subject of the elite drive toward Globalist Technocracy.

1 0 Reply • Share ›

Stephen Simac ➦ W. Poe White
11 days ago

The TechnoCrat Ennablers play a critical role in Billionaire Buccaneers looting the planet. Buckminster Fuller wrote about the recruitment of the Best and the Brightest for this purpose. Occupy talked about the 1%, (actually the .01%), but the 11% below them do most of the heavy lifting. They are well rewarded, and imagine they are indispensable, but will be tossed off the sled to the wolves if it comes to that.

0 0 Reply • Share ›

W. Poe White ➦ Stephen Simac
10 days ago

There's still the question of who makes the big decisions. My hunch is that there is no single small body of oligarchs who decide everything. Rather, various members of the 11% think up initiatives. Meanwhile, researchers continue to innovate new potent technologies. Then a much smaller group of people decide to implement some of these initiatives after consulting with each other in various venues such as Bilderberg meetings, the CFR, Trilateral Commission, Aspen Institute confabs, so-called philanthropic foundations, think tanks like RAND, university sponsored conferences, professional society meetings, corporate boardrooms etc. as well as informal direct communications between "inner party" elites.

Some elites have more weight that others in making various decisions, with different elites playing major roles in different decisions. But none of them are involved in every decision.

This still leaves most, if not all, important decisions being made

see more

0 0 Reply • Share ›

Voyt Regnal ➦ W. Poe White
13 days ago

Larry Romanoff Archive...find corroboration of your suggestion ...

0 0 Reply • Share ›

MultiChubby1 ➦ Voyt Regnal
13 days ago

Exactly my thought. If the 'club' was worried about this man, the article would not be here or anywhere.

1 0 Reply • Share ›

Judith ➦ MultiChubby1
13 days ago

I'm afraid that's what I thought, also.
I think these guys are the puppets - the faces of the oligarchs.
I don't think we have any idea at all who the real controllers are. I believe they are filthy rich beyond Gates, Bezos, and the rest.
It's all such a big show. Such a lie. All of it.
I wish this author well, but I just don't believe these are the folks in real control.

1 0 Reply • Share ›

correspondence committee ➦ Judith
12 days ago

Well, I guess we don't have to worry about them, then.

0 0 Reply • Share ›

Voyt Regnal ➦ Judith
13 days ago

bingo !

0 0 Reply • Share ›

correspondence committee ➦ MultiChubby1
12 days ago

If the club is already that much in control, why are we having any consideration of the club at all?

0 0 Reply • Share ›

correspondence committee ➦ Voyt Regnal
12 days ago

Okay, who are those hiding behind these? Names, please. Or is it Russian dolls all the way down?

0 0 Reply • Share ›

Stephen Simac ➦ correspondence committee
11 days ago

Matryoshka Turtles All the Way Down to the Man Behind the Curtain.

0 0 Reply • Share ›

Christina
12 days ago

I don't see Charles face on the cover

3 0 Reply • Share ›

MultiChubby1
13 days ago

"Once someone is awake to the truth about what's going on, they can't really be put back to sleep." True, but there other means to silence their voices. I wonder about all these truth tellers. Are they being paid to provide the 'awake' masses the illusion of choice? After recounting the impossible horrors that are impending, they tell us that we are all so brave etc. etc. But if you are freezing and starving to death, courage is not useful except to die well.

3 0 Reply • Share ›

Stephen Simac ➦ MultiChubby1
11 days ago

Look to the book's publisher, do they have their own billionaire agenda? Possibly the only forces powerful and influential enough to challenge one faction, will be another, but the danger is that they will all Limited Hangout together, rather than hang separately.

0 0 Reply • Share ›

larsetom1
13 days ago

RE: By the time the COVID-19 pandemic hit

Well, I stopped reading right here. There's probably good information in the book, but it does seem like re-writing history. Nothing about Event 201, nothing about that Covid was just rebranded flu, that the PCR test wasn't fit for purpose, manipulated statistics, that the whole thing was a fraud to fast forward the Globalist agenda.

2 0 Reply • Share ›

chris
13 days ago

Just wonder how much overlap is between the 'Club of Rome' and the 'others':

Skull and Bones – The Dark History of an Impenetrable Secret Society! (so many members, including Austan Dean Goolsbee, the same related to MTV International, Obama campaign..)

or/and the Zionists, being the current topic of the new 'laws' on Anti-Zionism and Antisemitism...

2 0 Reply • Share ›

Stephen Simac ➦ chris
11 days ago

Don't forget the other seven secret societies of Yale, plus other Ivy League confraternities that work together after graduation to ensure success for their elite pledges.

0 0 Reply • Share ›

Larry DeMarco
12 days ago

Thank you guys for the valuable insights. Looks like everything we read and hear must be "taken with grain of salt." Unfortunately, it makes our fight much harder when even the supposed good guys don't give us the full story of truth. I'm sure that most everyone with a bully pulpit is censored in some way, financially or physically, and must submit to some limitations in maintaining their platform. However we must take what we can from these reports and not discount them entirely. It's a pleasure to stand with thoughtful people like you, and I'm sure that the list is growing, but I pray that our social awakening is not too little or too late.

1 0 Reply • Share ›

Rob DF
13 days ago

""You're not going to be getting the same salary once a robot can do 1,000 people's jobs," he said."... Why? If the robot just replaced 1000 people and the same output (value) was produced where did it go?

1 0 Reply • Share ›

W. Poe White ➦ Rob DF
12 days ago

Plainly the revenue no longer expended on wages and salaries would now all go to capital as profits, interest, dividends, rent and royalties (as well as exorbitant salaries/perquisites for top level execs).

But the plutocratic elites have so much money already that there is little concern for maximization of profits or increasing net assets per se. They are out to gobble up more and more market share so as to eventually monopolize all production. The Technocratic Globalist capitalist elite want to own virtually everything so that they might institute Technocracy, which requires centralized control of all means of production by a managerial oligarchy. Amassing wealth is not an end in itself for them. They seek unrestrained collective dictatorial power.

1 0 Reply • Share ›

Carol C
12 days ago

Seems to me this billionaire AI death cult is the most severe threat to us and our planet. There are a handful of them but billions of us.

0 0 Reply • Share ›

Gary Brown
12 days ago

Feb 3, 2022 Klaus Schwab 2017 Young Global Leaders AUDIO cleaned up!

Klaus Schwab talks about penetrating the cabinets of the young global leaders governments. As printed on page 188 of The Great Reset book: "Build Back Better". They are all, literally, on the same page.

see more

0 0 Reply • Share ›

Stephen Simac ➦ Gary Brown
11 days ago

Are those owls in the Royal Crest? or Peacock Feathers? or some kind of flower?

1 0 Reply • Share ›

Gary Brown ➦ Stephen Simac
11 days ago

I would not know, I ain't no member of this club.

0 0 Reply • Share ›

Stephen Simac ➦ Gary Brown
11 days ago

Owls are the symbol of Diana the Huntress- not the Princess. Occult, Night, Silent Flight, Fur and Bone Balls- not really Wisdom that's a cover.

0 0 Reply • Share ›

Stephen Simac ➦ Stephen Simac
11 days ago

Ostrich Feathers= https://www.designweek.co.u... something to do with Africa? Heraldic redesign, no lions rampant.

0 0 Reply • Share ›

Beatrice
12 days ago

If you don't want to be a slave, in one of their prison "cells" get rid of your smart phone. It's the one way to take back control over your own life and prevent anyone from gaining that control again. I don't use one (I don't use any cell phone) and I keep all my computers off line except this one for a very brief period- just to post here or to check email. Then, I unplug until next time. It's quite remarkable how freedom feels so good all over.

0 0 Reply • Share ›

Subscribe Privacy Do Not Sell My Data

Children's Health Defense

Children's Health Defense® is a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization. Our mission is to end childhood health epidemics by working aggressively to eliminate harmful exposures, hold those responsible accountable and establish safeguards to prevent future harm. We fight corruption, mass surveillance and censorship that put profits before people as well as advocate for worldwide rights to health freedom and bodily autonomy.

THE DEFENDER IS AVAILABLE IN:

ENGLISH SPANISH PORTUGUESE GERMAN ITALIAN FRENCH

TAKE ACTION

DONATE FREE SIGN-UP BECOME A MEMBER

Donations are tax deductible to the full extent of the law. EIN #26-0388604

© 2016 - 2023 Children's Health Defense® • All Rights Reserved • Sitemap